

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process wherein a cyclic carbonate compound bearing an electrophilic group is reacted with a compound containing a nucleophilic group, especially an amine group. Such reactions permit to obtain urethane groups useful in polymer preparation, such as polyurethanes, or other urethane-containing polymers.